Louisville, Kentucky

a January-Term course

If you're a seminarian interested in exploring the structure, program and mission of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) and its relationship with local congregations and presbyteries, this for-credit course during J-term is exactly what you've been looking for.

Through encounters with national leadership and interactive encounters with various program area of the denomination, participants will gain an understanding of the theology, mission, structure, and programs of the PC(USA) and how to exercise effective congregational leadership in the context of a connectional church. Each participant will have the opportunity to engage with the ministries of the six agencies of the General Assembly and reflect on them in light of the vision of the PC(USA) and of contemporary studies on leadership

Required course work, including reading and written assignments, have been designed to help you reflect theologically and practically on what you learn about the work of our denominational offices and its significance in local congregations.
